

than 90 degrees via a door support member comprised of a nylon strap with loops provided at each end and allowing access to an interior storage chamber defined by the assembly, and provides a platform outside the structure, said door is supported via said support member which stores within the assembly while in the closed position and supports the door and a person while in the horizontal position, said support member is secured at a first end to the vertical wall of a enclosure frame, said support member is attached at the second end to said door through spaced apart apertures and secured to the strap retaining rod by placing the second loop over the strap retaining rod; and

(b) a collapsible flexible ladder comprised of nylon straps with a loop provided at the first end, the first end is attached to the door through spaced apart apertures and secured to the strap retaining rod by placing said loop over the strap retaining rod.

Please amend claim 2 as follows:

2. (Amended) The assembly as recited in claim 1, wherein the hinged door has an interior surface and an exterior surface, and the exterior surface of the door can be adapted to be covered with a material matching the exterior wall of the structure.